

I do not want the Indiana law regarding phone solicitations changed. It has been pleasant not getting 5 to 10 calls an evening from rude and obnoxious solicitors trying to sell me something I have no intention of buying. What gives them the right to continue to contact me after I've specifically requested that they not?? By what right can they bother me all through an evening with annoying and pushy sales pitches?? Their primary target for these calls are our older citizens, and their primary sales method is to create confusion. I pay for my phone line and I should be able to tell someone to stay off of it!!

Thank you for your consideration.